COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

At the annual town meeting an appropriation was made for the control of Dutch Elm disease. This is controlled by removing the dead limbs from the elms. Last week a crew was in town trimming the trees on the Common, along Broad Street, between the sidewalk and the street, in front of the Library, and on Elm Street. The trimming adds to the general appearance of the trees as well as eliminating the danger from falling limbs.

The large building which houses the fire department has not been kept up in recent years and its general appearance is very poor in comparison to other property in the area. The condition of the porch is such that it is beyond repair and it is being removed this week. A local painter has been engaged to paint the front and side facing the parsonage. The color will be white and it will be a two coat job.

It is understood that the Chapman estate will also paint their part of the building at the same time.

Although the rear of the building needs some repair work as well as painting, this cannot be done this year for lack of funds. Provisions should be made to do this next year, for the preservation of the building as well as general appearance.

Sincerely,
Harold L. Bean

dent of another county and has its own claims concerning beauty, climate and its people.

We were told, while in the northern part of England; that is, Yorkshire and Lancashire, that they were the friendliest people in England and that the southerners were "backward at coming forward."

The south claims quiet friendliness and tradition for its people; and then we found the midlanders, the people of the group called midland counties, stretching east and west from Wales to the eastern coast.

We just left the county of Shropshire on the Welsh border a county the size of Oxford County, with industry and agriculture fighting the battle over land. This is the area of England where open cast coal mining is eating away the farmers' land and dumping it in heaps on top of the ground. It is the beginning of the Black Country, the industrial cities and pottery factories, for all of England's most famous china comes from this region. Royal Delfon, Wedgwood, and Coalport are made here by workers who have handed down the art of molding and painting the delicate flowers and designs on this, the most exquisite and expensive china in the world.

The farmers here number roughly 6000; that is, the number of farmers belonging to the National Farmers' Union in the county of Shropshire. Acreage is relatively small per farm but there are many large rented farms. My host in Shropshire was a girl who had come to America as an IFVE in 1933 and visited South Carolina and Kansas. She worked on the farm now, taking care of the poultry and the housework. The house was very large with a sitting room, a drawing room, and dining room downstairs. Upstairs there were six bedrooms. It was the kitchen of the big elaborate home that surprised me with its stone floor and pump.

As I mentioned before, refrigerators are a luxury in the English home, as temperatures rarely warrant cooler provision than in the lander on the back slab where butter is kept perfectly and milk rarely, if ever, goes sour. This house was no exception in the refrigerator line. Two stoves, one coal and one electric, were used for cooking and because they were not on the main electrical line, but ran on batteries, freezing was done

300 ATTEND 4-H FIELD DAY AT BEAR POND

The Oxford County 4-H Field Day was held at Bear Pond Park, North Turner, on Tuesday, June 18. Over three hundred members, leaders, and 4-H friends registered with Mrs Tina Kelleher, Extension secretary, between 9:30 and 12 o'clock. The junior leaders from the Busy Workers Club in Canton organized and carried out the four treasure hunts planned for the morning. The 8 and 10-year-olds joined in one treasure hunt under the guidance of Mrs Dorothy Brown, East Waterford; Mrs Rachel Mackay, Bethel, guided the 11 and 12-year-olds; the 13 and 14-year-old 4-Hers were guided by the IFVE delegate, Maureen Clementson. While these youngsters enjoyed looking for the hidden treasures, other members were enjoying volleyball, softball, and roller skating. The two swimming periods during the day were supervised by two life guards provided by the park, plus older 4-H boys supervising from boats. The "buddy" system was used with several "buddy" checks. Locker rooms were provided free through the courtesy of Stephen Koske.

The traditional watermelon, donated by the Norway A. & P. Store, was awarded to the highest scoring club of the afternoon relays and checks. Judges picked the Kando Club of South Paris, as having the best cheer: The Future Homemakers of West Paris, came second; and the Hanover Projectors, third. A leader from each club joined in a balloon-blowing contest to help earn points toward the watermelon. Relays were carried out by the club agents. The highest scoring club and winner of the watermelon was the Hanover Projectors. Three clubs tied for second place and they were: Kando, South Paris; Huckle Bustle, Hanover; and Pine Tree, Oilsfield. Prizes were paid for by the Leaders Association.

Clubs represented were: Happy Hornets, Boy Bees, Lucky Thirteen, Nature Boys, and Zippy Snappers, all of Bethel; the East Bethel Lucky Clover and Early Risers Clubs; Buckfield Bees; Canton Point Busy Workers; Hanover Huckle Bustle and Hanover Projectors; Norway Center Chickadees and Norway Center Wilkies; Oilsfield Pine Tree and Go-Getter Clubs; East Oxford Hittoppers; South Paris Hungry Hollow Hils Hoes, Jolly Girls, Kando, and Ready Workers clubs; West Paris Future Homemakers; West Paris Diskvato Busy Beavers; Rumford Center Wonder Workers; Sumner Valley Club; and the East Waterford Peterville Phoggers.

Those present at the county dairy judging contest held at Konato Cummings, South Paris, where Holsteins were judged, and Howard Skurdevan's, South Paris, where Jerseys were judged, were: Duane and Ralph Conant, Arthur, Russell, and Leland Hayford, Richard McCreave and Charles Hines, all of Canton, and Alvin Brown, of East Waterford. The winners of this contest, who will go to Grand July 15 to 18, are Alvin Brown, Richard McCreave, Duane Conant, and Arthur Hayford.

The winner in the junior division was Charles Hines and he will receive a ribbon.

PLANS FOR BAZAAR WELL UNDER WAY

Twenty-two persons attended the progress planning meeting last Friday evening to discuss the coming Mollycoddle Day activities. As the plans take shape it becomes evident that this year will see many more booths and activities to entertain the crowds. Rev Laws showed the blueprint of the Common where booths will stretch from one end to the other on both sides. The Papoose Reservation will occupy one entire end of the Common with numerous attractions near and dear to the hearts of the youngsters.

This year all the booths will be of uniform size and construction and decorated in the rustic design of Mollycoddle's years, while all the people working on this project have been asked to dress in some style of Mollycoddle's time.

The booths will open for business at 11 a. m. on Saturday, July 27. The auction which will be held at the Community Room with Stuart Martlon as auctioneer, will also start at 11 a. m. The baseball game is scheduled for 2 p. m. and the parade at 4:30 p. m. Mrs Rodney Eames and Mrs Vernon Brown are the parade chairmen this year and are already working on the details to make it the best parade ever. All participants are asked to be ready and assembled at 4:15 at the latest and the parade will start marching promptly at 4:30.

The bean supper will be served from 5:30 to 7:30 by the Methodist Brotherhood and the Congregational Women's Fellowship while the Beano will be conducted as usual by the Legion. Another attraction this year will be the square dance on the Common starting at 8 p. m. with two "crackerjacks" oldtime fiddlers and Roy Wardwell as the caller.

These are only a few of the more than 50 booths and attractions already planned, such as corn-on-the-cob, raffle, games of skill, milk and ice cream bar, pop corn, homemade food, candy, hot dogs and cold drinks, flower show, bowling contest, conservation exhibit, and others. A full list of booths along with their sponsors will be published soon.

the Snapshot Guild

Flower enthusiasts find a camera a happy addition to their notebooks for record keeping.

Take Notes With Your Camera

Someone once said, "There are few phases of human activity in which a camera cannot serve as a friendly companion—and the best of all possible notebooks."

Today we're suggesting you put your camera to use to record your special interests. Let's say you have an entry in a log, horse, or livestock show—or maybe it's a model competing in the model aircraft meet—or perhaps you're off on a garden tour or at a business convention. Only with a camera in hand can you really bring home a complete account of the event you attend.

If you collect china, or glass, mineral specimens, old guns, coins, or almost any other type of small object, your camera with a close-up lens can provide pictures to exchange with fellow collectors. Should your special collector's items be valuable, your camera will be invaluable as a means of copying. With a facsimile record of each item, the original need not be marred by handling.

As a student of nature, you'll appreciate color film, and a close-up attachment for picturing specimens in their natural habitat before you bring them home. If your hobby is model aircraft, you'll find your camera a real help in recording each step in construction. And if you're still in school, snapshots can illustrate term papers and laboratory projects—as well as record your student activities and associations in a personal "yearbook" of your own.

In family projects, such as building a new home, a day-by-day picture record is desirable, too—and sometimes can settle disputes about any phase of the construction. Remodeling and landscaping operations also merit the full "before and after" picture treatment.

In business as well as leisure-time activities, a camera can perform worthwhile services for you. Many businessmen have found pictures to be a quick, handy system of note-taking. A few clicks of the shutter—and they have a permanent memorandum of methods of doing a particular operation, business ideas, window displays, store signs, and the like. Today, a great number of artists like to carry cameras to supplement their sketchbooks; hunters and explorers do as much shooting with film as they do with firearms.

LAFF OF THE WEEK

"... you barely miss my last pump getting out of here, drive over the curb, knock down that sign at Center Street, and when you hit that tree at the next intersection—that's where you turn left."

getting up at 5 a. m.; do the poultry and care for the gardens. The courses offered are general agriculture, dairy, poultry, horticulture and domestic science. The students do their farm and even after the year's farm experience necessary prior to enrollment. The average age is 17. The majority of graduates from this type of school will get jobs on farms or go back home to gradually acquire a farm of their own.

Every county has an institute similar to this, offering a one-year agricultural course. It seems to me a very good way to bring better farming practices to England's farms.

It's very hot today and everyone is sunbathing and taking advantage of the good weather, so I'm off now for a game of tennis and then a swim in the reservoir. Cheerio.

Sincerely,
Shirley Bartlett

JUST LAZY AND HAPPY

By Venus English

SUMMER'S close friends are the ones who are the most comfortable to our life. We take care of that ourselves.

It wasn't that way with the summer. They said their kids and were themselves in college when they wanted to go to school, and they made something of every one of them. Of course the kids, either from gratitude or revenge, I'm not sure which, insisted that their parents retire from the farm and live somewhere else to run it for them.

Anyhow, to get back to where I started, the neighbors came home last August to rest up for next year's planting, and they stayed to one night to talk about how much they enjoyed their trip on the new house trailer. They talked and talked and talked, and we sat and listened, wishing that they'd go and let us get back to being lazy and comfortable. Their enthusiasm was just too strong on them and on us. I can't remember much of what they said except that when they talked about the accident, several of our best of friends tried to leave them and their trailer and ended up in the ditch, two small children and the father killed, and the mother in the hospital where they still didn't know if she'd lose her unborn baby or not.

"As it was all for nothing," said the Mrs. "Just because they were in a hurry and tried to pass on a hill it's just terrible how inconsiderate people are of trouble on the highways. But we didn't give in to us. Just kept on going down the middle of our town." She shook her head. "Oh, it was bad. You should have been there and seen it."

Maybe so, but you know, I don't think we should make it a habit to have the sort of thing I'd want to have to remember. But I guess that's because the thing was so bad. And the way they were so close to it. Just long.

And long.
